1. The first two groups working for the Russians on research formerly conducted at the Gema plant are as follows:
 - a. A Schraubenfabrik (screw factory) in Berlin-Oberschöneweide engaged in the development of high-frequency tubes. More than 100 German technicians are supervised by three or four Soviet officers. The latter are working under the cover of German civilians. The project was formerly operated at the Gema plant.
 - b. Other ex-Gema workers are to work under Dr. Giovanni Hilgors beginning sometime in January. The working capital is RM 500,000. The aim is the development of testing apparatus for steering devices used for aircraft, rockets, jet missiles.
2. Headquarters for these operations is the Konstruktionsbüro of the Russian Navy Ministry located in 21 family houses in the Karlshorst enclave. Chief is Colonel Korshonov (also received Korshhnov, earlier reported as Korseov or Korshov). Korshonov was warned by higher HQ not to do anything which might produce accusations of violation of the Potsdam agreement and he is now trying to solve this problem.
